SPECIAL SPORTS NIGHT TO MARK LOYOLA'S 75TH ANNIVERSARY

Sports celebrities from three different categories will be honored by Loyola as part of the College's 75th Anniversary celebrations next Friday evening, November 12th.

The categories are: Loyola graduates presently serving in coaching or sports administrative positions; past and present members of the Loyola Sports Hall of Fame's Board of Directors, Selection, Nomination, and Research Committees; and the Loyola Sports Hall of Fame members themselves.

Ceremonies will begin at 8 p.m. in the arena of Loyola's Athletic Complex followed by a Loyola Warriors-McGill Redmen hockey game. There will also be a post game reception for the honored guests and families. Each recipient will be presented with a memento of the occasion by Loyola College President, the Very Rev. Patrick G. Malone, S.J.

Among the Loyola grads to be recognized for their work as coaches or sports administrators are: Brian O'Neill, Director of Administration, National Hockey League; Pat Nolan, Director Canadian Olympic Association; Dr. John Meagher, Dean of the School of Physical Education, University of New Brunswick; J.C. Vadeboncoeur, Athletic Director at the University of Montreal; Al Grazys, Hockey and Assistant Football Coach at Bishop's University; Charles Smith, Basketball Coach and Athletic Director, Vanier College; and Dave Lennon, Head Football Coach, Vanier College.

In the second category, the men who have made the Loyola Sports Hall of Fame the success that it is through their unselfish work behind the scenes will be honored. Heading the list is Ed Enos, Director of Physical Education and Athletics at the College. It was Enos who conceived the idea of a Loyola Sports Hall of Fame and has been the driving force on the Board of Directors.

All other past and present Hall of Fame Directors and Selection, Nomination and Research Committee members will also be honored.

Among the most notable are the three men who have served as chairmen of the Selection Committee: Andy O'Brien, Sports Editor of Weekend Magazine and the Hall's First Chairman; Marcel Desjardins, former Sports Editor of La Presse; and Dick Irvin, Sports Director of CFCF radio and television, the present chairman.

The third and most significant category, in terms of the 75th Anniversary, scheduled to be honored are the members of the Hall of Fame.

and extra-curricular excellence of Loyola more than the Sports Hall of Fame. Members of the Hall include a former ambassador, a senator, several noted physicians, the president of a large corporation, the dean of a university faculty and several prominent businessmen -- all of whom have distinguished themselves in athletics.

The Hall of Fame has had special meaning not only to the inductees but for many graduates as it has rekindled their interest in Loyola. For the current student body, the Hall is tangible evidence that there is an active Alumni Association. The Hall also is an example of the accomplishments of former graduates.

The following is a list of the members inducted into the Hall of Fame and a brief resume of the feats that earned them this distinction.

ELECTED IN 1967, THE INAUGURAL YEAR

Robert (Bob) Bedard, who graduated from Loyola College in 1951, became Canada's most accomplished tennis player by collecting 213 consecutive victories over Canadian opponents between 1954 and 1964. He won a silver medal in tennis play at the 1959 Pan-American Games in Chicago.

Dr. Robert J. (Bob) Brodrick, who graduated in 1943, rounded out a glittering college sports career by coaching and playing hockey in the United Kingdom, writing a book on hockey that is quoted in the Encyclopedia Britannica and winning professional acclaim as a physician. He is currently the team physician for the Montreal Expos of baseball's National League.

Charles (Dinny) Dinsmore, although never a student at Loyola College, commands a place in the Hall of Fame because of his extraordinary contribution to student sports as a distinguished coach of Loyola hockey and football teams over a span of 10 years beginning in 1930. Dinny, as a hockey player, achieved the game's highest goal in having his name inscribed on the Stanley Cup as a star member of the 1926 Montreal Maroons.

Paul Haynes, who graduated from Loyola College in 1930, was one of the truly great, all-round athletes ever to wear Loyola colors. Paul was star quarterback of the 1928 Dominion intercollegiate football championship team. He was twice captain of the senior hockey team. This, in turn, led him after graduation into a 10-year, headline career in the National Hockey League with the old Montreal Maroons, Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens.

(deceased) Francis J. (Shag) Shaughnessy Sr. made two contributions to Loyola -- eight sons, all athletes, who attended the college and a coach of several college football teams, notably the 1928 team that won the Dominion intercollegiate intermediate title. Shag also served 21 years as commissioner of the International Baseball League.

Frank Shaughnessy Jr., who graduated from Loyola in 1932, starred in high school and college football, hockey, baseball and track teams from 1924 to 1932. He was chef de mission for four Canadian teams at the Winter Olympics between 1956 and 1968. He is presently the Vice-President of the Canadian Olympic Association.

Bernard H. (Bernie) McCallum, who graduated from Loyola in 1943, won three most valuable player awards as a Loyola hockey star and returned after serving in the Second World War to guide eight Loyola hockey teams to intercollegiate titles. He also coached Loyola football teams for 10 years. He is presently Director of Alumni Affairs for Loyola College.

(deceased) Senator Charles (Chubby) Power, who graduated in 1907, refused a career in professional hockey to take up a distinguished role in Canadian politics. He was Minister of National Defence for Air in the Second World War and was a member of the Canadian Senate.

His Excellency Pedro Suinaga-Lujan, who graduated in 1926, became Mexico's Ambassador to Canada following an illustrious career in academics and athletics at Loyola College. His kicking feats helped Loyola win junior intercollegiate and Dominion football titles. He was a member of Mexico's national soccer team that competed in the 1928 Olympics and served on the organizing body for the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City.

(deceased) Robert John (Jake) Warren, a star football and hockey player from the bantam to senior years at Loyola, did not graduate with the rest of the Class of '43 although his academic qualifications were impeccable. Jake gave his life in the cause of freedom while fighting for the allies as a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the Second World War.

ELECTED IN 1968

Norman A. Smith, who won the Birk's Medal as the most outstanding all-round person during four years of college, was an outstanding quarterback during his athletic career at Loyola. He also starred on hockey, baseball, track and lacrosse teams. He graduated in 1927.

Edmund R. Meagher, who graduated in 1946, has been identified with Loyola and Montreal sports for more than 30 years. A superb athlete from prep school in 1936 until graduation in 1946, he also served as Athletic Director of the high school for 14 years and combined a similar function for the college in 10 of those years.

T. Connell (Connie) Broden, who graduated in 1952, had an athletic career of rare distinction. He played on 13 championship teams beginning with the Loyola high school bantam football teams in 1946 and 1947. He led the Whitby Dunlops to the world amateur hockey title in 1958 and joined the Montreal Canadiens as they won a Stanley Cup the same year.

J. Joseph Poirier, named to six Canadian Football League all-star teams during a sparkling career with the Ottawa Rough Riders, began his career at Loyola as a defensive mainstay of the 1954 and 1955 Loyola football teams.

ELECTED IN 1969

Herbert (Herb) English, who graduated in 1953, helped win football titles in three divisions and a senior hockey crown during his career at Loyola. The captain of several teams, he was named an all-star at the senior level in both football and hockey. He was a member of the Montreal Junior Canadiens from 1949 to 1952, helping them win the Memorial Cup in 1950.

(deceased) Harry Hyland has been specifically credited with the birth of Loyola College's long hockey tradition. From 1912 to 1961, he coached five Loyola teams, two of which won the Junior championship of Canada. Hyland's continuing attendance at college hockey and other events during the intervening decades is judged to have provided "stimulus of profound value". As a hockey player, Harry is recognized as one of Canada's greatest. On the basis of his ability, Hyland was named to Hockey's Hall of Fame.

Dr. John (Jack) McMullan, who graduated from Loyola in 1963, captained football teams in the four years of his college career as well as leading the hockey Warriors to four straight Ottawa-St. Lawrence title, tying for the points championship in his graduating year. He went on to McGill University where he quarterbacked the Redmen one year and starred on the hockey team from 1954 to 1957.

Dr. William (Bill) Orban, a former football coach and Athletic Director at Loyola College, is known in world fitness circles as the man who developed the 5BX plan for fitness used by Canadian armed forces. He is now the Dean of the School of Physical Education at the University of Ottawa.

ELECTED IN 1970

Dr. William L. Beauregard, who graduated in 1954, was as outstanding in the classroom as he was on the field. He won the Loyola High School Medal, and on graduating from college captured the Loyola Medal for combined athletic and academic excellence. He was a defensive stalwart on the last three Loyola Warrior hockey teams to win the Ottawa-St. Lawrence until 1954.

(deceased) John O'Neill Gallery, who graduated in 1917, is identified as a star of Loyola hockey teams from 1913 to 1916. Actually, he was a superb all-round athlete. He broke four college track and field records in a 1913 meet and two years later broke three more and tied one. He took the individual aggregate trophy for four successive years.

Peter Anthony Howlett, who graduated in 1963, went on to become a member of the Montreal Alouettes. He starred in football and basketball at Loyola, winning athlete-of-the-year honors in 1962 and 1963 to go with the MVP award in football the same years.

Clifford S. Malone, who graduated in 1947, was the leading scorer of the Loyola interprovincial hockey champions of 1945-46. Throughout his
